

2016 Presidential Candidates-Magazine Covers

Analyze and Deconstruct A Magazine Cover

Pictured here are a number of recently published magazine covers featuring candidates running in 2016 for President of The United States. The covers can be used to engage students in a “visual literacy” deconstruction. We might remind students that each cover started out blank—an editorial team working with a graphic designer collaborated to decide what goes on the cover. They must also consider what will attract the reader and sell. If you or your students have never analyzed magazine covers, this website, Secrets of Magazine Cover Design, is a good place to get started. (Also, the Center for Media Literacy’s webpage offers some good suggestions on how to help students deconstruct a magazine cover.)

DOWNLOAD: Questions for Students To Consider While Analyzing a Magazine Cover

SAMPLE: Magazine Cover & Questions for Students

Each cover (below) represents a larger section: click on the cover to go to that section. Once there, individual covers can be seen in larger versions: simply hover your cursor over the ones which are hyperlinked.

Donald Trump (photos)

Donald Trump (illustrations)

Trump with others (illustrations)

Hillary Clinton (photos)

Hillary Clinton (illustration)

Trump vs Clinton (photo/illustration)

Bernie Sanders (photos)

Bernie Sanders (illustrations)

Sanders vs Clinton (photos and illustrations)

Ted Cruz (photos)

Ted Cruz (illustration)

Ted Cruz & Others

Various Candidates
(illustrations)

