

Images of War

This web page has been recommended by:

- PBS (The Power of Pictures: from "Reporting America At War")

INTRODUCTION/BACKGROUND:

From the Civil War to Wars in Iraq and the Mideast, photographic images have played a major role in how we perceive and understand conflicts. On this web site, we offer some of the still photos taken by photographers: some have been published in newspapers and online, some have not. (In addition, you will find resources related to previous wars and more recent conflicts).

As students consider photographs/video, they should keep in mind the following questions:

- who took the images and for what purpose?
- who/what is being shown? who/what is not being shown? why or why not?
- how might the current conflict restrict a photographer?
- are war photographers free to go where they want or are they accompanied by military personnel?
- how might the "embedding" of news personnel help/restrict our understanding?
- how might a specific photo/video be used to sway public opinion?
- has your local newspaper printed pictures of people injured or killed? If not, why not?
